INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (●). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.

2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.

3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.

4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.

5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

Further examines the data gathered in 1991 in a survey of Toronto Board of Education secondary school students. Looks in depth at group characteristics and differences from 3 perspectives: gender; race and ethnicity; and family background. This third part of a study begun in 1991 focuses on student program enrollment patterns and achievement in Toronto secondary schools. It highlights student demographics and school-related characteristics at the advanced, general and basic levels, and contrasts them with results of the 1987 survey. Its examination of student school performance concentrates on academic attainment based on school marks and credit accumulation records. Links data from these records to socio-demographic and school-related variables in order to indicate whether and how student school performance is related to factors such as gender and racial makeup, family situations, school perception, homework, and aspirations. Comparisons with 1987 outcome results show significant change in achievement over the past few years. ED MU ON OR SS

Abundance, age, size, sex and coded wire tag recoveries for chinook salmon escapements of Campbell and Quinsam rivers, 1993

Vancouver, BC : Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, Biological Sciences Branch, 1994. ix, 59 p. : Bibl. (Canadian manuscript report of fisheries and aquatic sciences / Canada. Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans ; no. 2251 ISSN 0706-6473) CCG-P no. Fs97-4/2251E MICROLOG 95-00368 (1 fiche)

This report is part of a series describing the escapement monitoring and biological sampling of chinook salmon in the Campbell/Quinsam River system. The escapements of chinook salmon were calculated using the adjusted Petersen method by tagging carcasses to produce separate estimates for sexes and rivers and summing these to form a total estimate for the in-river escapement of chinook. The total recovery of chinook salmon at the Quinsam Hatchery was then added to the in-river estimates to produce a final escapement figure for the entire system. The report discusses potential biases in the Petersen method, carcass tagging method, and method of stratification and provides results of population estimates, tests for bias in tagging and recovery, population composition (age, length, and sex), and the results of coded wire tagging studies. ### Abundance, age, size, sex and coded wire tag recoveries for chinook salmon escapements of Kitsumkalum River, 1993

By T.C. Nelson. Vancouver, BC : Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, Biological Sciences Branch, 1994. viii, 47 p. : Bibl. (Canadian manuscript report of fisheries and aquatic sciences / Canada. Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans ; no. 2249 ISSN 0706-6473) CCG-P no. Fs97-4/2249E MICROLOG 95-00369 (1 fiche)

This report is part of a series describing the escapement monitoring and biological sampling of chinook in the Kitsumkalum River. The escapement of chinook salmon was calculated using the adjusted Petersen method by tagging live chinook in situ and recovering carcasses. Separate population estimates were calculated for each sex for both the upper and lower sections of the river. A total estimate for the in-river escapement of chinook was calculated by summing the individual estimates. In this report potential biases in the Petersen method, the live tagging approach, and the method of stratification are discussed. Assumptions for the methods used and the tests for biases caused by violations of assumptions are also described in the methods section. The results section presents the population estimates, tests for bias in tagging and recovery, population composition and the results of coded wire tagging studies. The results are then discussed with respect to previous studies.

Abuse of the elderly : a guide for the development of protocols

Winnipeg : Manitoba Seniors Directorate ; Inter-departmental Working Group on Elder Abuse, 1993. 37 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-00132 (1 fiche)

Elder abuse is a multifaceted problem which may have implications for health, social and legal delivery systems. This guide has been prepared as a resource tool for those professionals who work with the elderly. It provides an introduction to and guidelines for the development of appropriate responses to elder abuse. It is anticipated that the guide will also facilitate the achievement of some consistency in identification and response to allegations of elder abuse throughout the province.

Because of the widespread use of SCANMAR hydroacoustic mensuration systems to obtain information on the performance of sampling trawls during bottom trawl surveys, it is important to determine the quality of the data collected and the noise edit of the criteria to be used in preparing an error-free database for analysis. This work was undertaken to assure various present and potential users, including gear technologists and stock assessment biologists, that the data collected are precise and therefore valuable in the interpretation of trawl performance and survey results. The report describes the raw data collected by SCANMAR instruments during standard bottom trawl surveys conducted by three DFO laboratories in Atlantic Canada; assesses the quality of the data and describes edit criteria for screening them before analysis; and presents the results of a sensor calibration exercise conducted in Bedford Basin, Nova Scotia, in 1993.

The conservation potential review was begun in 1991 to develop comprehensive and reliable estimates of the potential for electricity conservation in British Columbia to 2010. To arrive at estimates that all stakeholders could agree to, a Collaborative Committee was formed representing 34 organizations of commercial, industrial, and residential electricity users, environmental interests, aboriginal peoples, local governments, and utilities. Phase II applied practical limitations to the unconstrained potential identified in Phase I to estimate the achievable potential for electricity conservation, dividing that potential into technological and operating changes and lifestyle changes. This report deals with the changes achievable through technological and operating change in the residential, commercial, and industrial sectors. It also provides a description of scenarios and approach for forecasting marketing penetration. A glossary is included.

Raises the possibility than an anti-racist education model might be preferable to the current multicultural approach. The Ontario Ministry of Education defines anti-racist education as "the effort to counter forms of racism manifested in the education process. [It] seeks to identify and change institutional policies, procedures, individual behaviours and practices that may foster racism". Discusses the whole-school approach, prejudice reduction strategies, and assessment and placement of minority students. Points to cultural difference as barriers for instruction. Contends that staff composition should reflect student body composition to provide role models for racial minority students. Includes an extensive bibliography of related texts.

This volume reports archaeological surveys and excavations done in the vicinity of the obsidian source located in the Koyukuk River drainage south of Hughes, Alaska. The area has been designated Batza Téna following local Koyukon Athapaskan usage. Collections were made at nearly 100 localities or points, and this has resulted in a mass of data that often is difficult to synthesise. Sites and artifacts are grouped by chapter. The emphasis in this report is primarily historiographic rather than on the mode of resource exploitation.

Before the arrival of the Europeans in the 19th century, the people who are now called Mackenzie Eskimos inhabited the western Canadian Arctic coast between Barter Island and Cape Bathurst. Little is known of them but this document attempts to assemble a picture from the few and diverse published and archival sources available as a background for the interpretation of archaeological evidence presented. The archaeological excavations were undertaken in summer 1969 and 1970 and concentrated on the large prehistoric site of Kitegariyumiut and smaller related sites along the lower course of the East Channel. The document presents an interpretation of Mackenzie Eskimo prehistory based on the archaeological evidence, with particular reference to the development of the economic adaptation and distinctive cultural characteristics of the Kitegariyumiut groups over the past five centuries.

Benefits of improving water quality in the Abbotsford aquifer : an application of contingent valuation methods

By Anke Hauser and G. Cornelis Van Kooten. Ottawa : Environment Canada, 1993. ii, 39 p. : Bibl. Cover title: Benefits of improving water quality in the Abbotsford aquifer : an application of contingent value methods.
MICROLOG 95-00574 (1 fiche)

The Abbotsford aquifer is a large underground source of water that is important for domestic, municipal, agricultural, and industrial uses in both Canada and the United States. The aquifer encompasses the districts of Langley, Matsqui, and Abbotsford in British Columbia, and Sumas in the U.S. Although there has been an e coli bacterial contamination on occasion, the major problem is considered to be nitrate pollution. Both forms of pollution are caused by manure management practices. This study provides estimates of the benefits of reducing the externality impacts of manure on water quality. A contingent valuation instrument is used to determine whether the social (private plus off-farm) benefits from alternative livestock handling methods exceed their costs. The report includes the background to the problem of water quality degradation from agricultural pollution; reviews the use of the contingent valuation methods, including a theoretical model for measuring the benefits of improved water quality; and describes the survey instruments and the empirical results.

This initial report is based on a collection made over a number of years from a site on the Tobique Indian Reserve in New Brunswick. The impetus for examining the collection is the possibility that the area may be chosen for a sewage lagoon. This report gives an introduction to the region, followed by a description of the collections. It then examines some of the questions surrounding the site, the Tobique valley, and a certain period in New Brunswick's past to put the site into historical and regional context. Recommendations are offered for the site's future. AP CU PR SS

Along the Pacific side of Vancouver Island live a score of previously more numerous, culturally similar but politically distinct, peoples, given various overall names: Nootka, Aht, West Coast and, since 1978, Nuuchah-nulth. The southeast quarter of their area provides the subject matter of this volume which consists of two independently prepared but complementary studies. The first features Barkely Sound peoples and their territories, particularly the Tseshaht and the Ojlaht, as well as the people living near the mouth of Alberni Inlet. The second includes several historical accounts from the same region, then focuses more on the Dildahat and Pachedaht, who live to the southeast of Barkely Sound. Being salvage ethnology, the studies are based largely on recollections, and coverage is uneven. Oral history accounts, which evoke a sense of past times, place names and maps are included. The volume fits in with the Museum's long-standing Urgent Ethnology Programme. BC CA CU ND NP SS

Bien que la nature l'ait dotée d'un climat propice à l'agriculture, l'Italie ne dispose pas de suffisamment de bonnes terres arables pour nourrir sa population relativement importante. De ce fait, elle enregistre un déficit commercial chronique dans le secteur agro-alimentaire, particulièrement en ce qui concerne les denrées suivantes : céréales et oléagineux, bétail ainsi que produits carnés et laitiers. Ce document présente un profil du secteur de l'agro-alimentaire du pays.

The objectives of this study are to examine the recent trends in Canadian direct investment abroad, to analyze the performance of outward-oriented Canadian firms and to assess the effect of their activities on Canada on Canada. In particular, the research attempts to answer the following questions: how has the geographic and industrial distribution of CDIA changed over the last 20 years; what factors account for the dramatic increase in CDIA; what are the characteristics of top Canadian transnational corporations; does an increase in CDIA crowd out investment in Canada; are exports and direct investment abroad substitutes or complements; how well are the U.S. affiliates of Canadian transnational corporations performing in the United States relative to those from other countries; do outward-oriented Canadian firms perform better than domestically oriented firms; and, what are the possible costs and benefits of CDIA to Canada.

MICROLOG 95-00191 (1 fiche)

This document sets out the response of the Canadian Government to the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity. The response was the result of an 18-month process, conducted by a federal-provincial-territorial working group under mandate from environment, wildlife, parks, and forestry ministries. Information was obtained from existing biodiversity-related legislation, policies, and programs; a comparison of current activities and articles of the Convention; submissions from advisory group members; reports from expert focus groups; and the results of workshops that reviewed and debated issues and developed recommendations. The document addresses the biological foundation for sustainable development, loss of habitat, atmospheric change, human population and consumption, undervaluing and conserving biodiversity, and contributing to global biodiversity conservation. Goals are identified as conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity; ecological management; education and awareness; incentives and legislation; and international cooperation. The document also addresses implementation and the place of Indigenous communities.

By Richard Weiler. Toronto : Ministry of the Solicitor General and Correctional Services, 1993. 23 p. On cover: Community policing. ISBN 0-662-20464-6 CCG-P no. JS4-1/1993-4E

Community policing has become the main philosophical force behind various changes in most major police services in Canada. The philosophy emphasizes a shift in the respective roles of the police and the public and encourages a strong partnership between police and the community. Community consultative mechanisms are the most common means of realizing this partnership but there is a lack of information designed to assist people in establishing committees. This manual gives the historical context in which these committees have developed; summarizes patterns in the evolution of consultative committees, most of which have emerged in the past four years; reviews challenges that can arise in setting up the committees; and suggests ways to achieve success. The manual is based on relevant reports, committee minutes, discussions with community police experts, and with many of the people who have developed and maintained over 150 consultative committees.

This part of the Phase II study explored changes in individuals' behaviour as a tool to pursue conservation. The study used an analysis of electricity savings in 2010, based on a range of individual behaviour changes, and a vision of 2030 based on a model of sustainable society. A snapshot of changes that would have occurred by 2010 if the 2030 sustainable society were to be achieved was also investigated. For the 2010 analysis, a list of energy-saving behaviours that people in each sector might adopt was developed. Behaviours were then classified as minimal, moderate, or significant according to their impact on customer lifestyle. Energy reduction estimates for the behaviours were identified, and all the factors were put together for an overall analysis of the potential energy savings

This report documents the results of a project that included development of a consolidated index together with a classification scheme to apply to entries in the index. The project was divided into the major sub-projects of building the consolidated index, developing indexing and access vocabularies, and documenting thesaurus functional requirements and evaluating thesaurus building tools. This report covers the building of the consolidated index, including the organization of the sub-project; and activities, including creating a temporary consolidated index, identifying synonyms and lead terms, mapping terms to databases, developing maintenance procedures, and creating and applying a high-level classification scheme. The report also covers problems encountered and less learned.

This report documents the results of a project conducted as part of the Envirosource Common Access Framework. The project included development of a consolidated index together with a classification scheme to apply to entries in the index, the identification of common access vocabularies, and the definition of thesaurus building tool functionality with an evaluation of a variety of thesaurus building tools. The consolidated index and its classification scheme were based on the Envirosource inventory of information holdings, the departmental records automated management system (DRAM), and the Environment Libraries integrated and automated system (ELIAS) databases, while the common access vocabularies and thesaurus building tools documented were from within Environment Canada, the Federal Government, and the private sector, both national and international.

This study defines thesaurus functionality and the requirements imposed on thesaurus building software, reviewing both integrated and stand-alone thesauri and an Environment Canada prototype. To develop functional requirements, an initial set of thesaurus software evaluation criteria was compiled by reference to ANSI/NISO and ISO thesaurus standards and other published sources. From these, a checklist was created and individual software packages were graded. The commercial thesaurus building software packages identified and evaluated included those from England, Germany, and New Zealand, therefore preliminary evaluation was based on documentation, published and unpublished sources, and hands-on experience.

Functional requirements of a generic thesaurus were developed from the evaluation criteria and thesaurus features were categorized as mandatory, recommended, or desirable. Operational requirements were compiled for evaluation of the interface of the thesaurus with applications databases. Specific requirements of a thesaurus building tool for Environment Canada were developed from the generic requirements.

Ensuite, elle se propose de mesurer les taux de croissance de la productivité dans chacune de ces onze industries et de connaître les gains de productivité liés aux débordements internationaux. Enfin, elle a pour troisième but d'estimer les taux de rendement des débordements canado-américains au-delà des notions de rentabilité purement privée.

Results of work undertaken to develop and test a logical and structured method for evaluating the relative sensitivity of fish habitats within the Fraser River system to a variety of human activities. The study focused on habitat protection and addressed habitat sensitivity at the strategic planning level. The approach consists of the collection of biophysical information about the watershed and the fish stocks and habitat it contains; the production of sub-indices from this data using relatively simple relationships based largely on measured variables; and the aggregation of these sub-indices into a smaller number of indices that can be used for comparison across watersheds. The report describes a number of sub-indices divided into a series of categories based on the type of issues they address, including levels of human activity, levels of important environmental variables, the ability of the watershed to resist change, characteristics of particular habitat types, and characteristics of fish stocks.

Addressed how individuals represented new task demands so that prior knowledge is brought forward for consideration. Offered a conceptual framework to verify how individuals decide which strategies to select and how particular sequences of steps are adopted when generalizing from the given to the new. Proposed a developmental theory comprised of a typology of tasks in a hierarchy of complexity. MANOVA results of a study of grade 1-6 students indicated that the items in the typology were distinctive, although bound by the core construct of metaphorical thinking. 80 percent of the participants succeeded at simpler tasks before failing more difficult ones, a result useful in determining whether mastery on the former is related to performance in the latter. Results also showed that neurological development affected performance across the hierarchy.

It estimates the structural parameters using the Euler equation in a limited information framework that does not require an explicit solution for the model's control variables in terms of the exogenous forcing variables. The paper describes the linear-quadratic model and derives some of its implications; outlines the estimation strategy; and gives the empirical results.

Examined the effects of holistic language instruction on the writing abilities of early French immersion grade 1 students. Through analysis of stories and journals written by 23 such students over a school year, the author argued against separation of the language arts, the establishment of uniform sequences on teaching objectives, and the teaching of skills in isolation, all of which are common practices in early French immersion classes. Conclusions emphasized the role of the teacher in encouraging decision-making and in gaining first-hand experience to become effective. Recommended that students write for a variety of purposes and audiences in order to facilitate learning to write and spell in a second language.

Because of funding difficulties faced by universities, there exists an increasing need for those institutions to describe their economic contributions to the overall economy and to encourage continued support from government. This report provides an accounting framework to gauge secondary benefits of university education and defines the boundary of production that encloses the economic activities engaged in sustaining the financial demands of normal university activities. It describes the province-wide impacts of total university expenditures and the economic impact of 1 percent decrease in Ontario funding.

The EED solvent extraction process for the removal of petroleum-derived hydrocarbons from soil

By C. Yvan Bastien. Ottawa : Environment Canada, Environmental Technology Centre, Emergencies Science Division, 1994. vi, 52 p. : Ill. Bibl. (Report series / Environmental Technology Centre (Canada). Emergencies Science Division ; EE-148) MICROLOG 95-00592 (1 fiche)

In 1990, an investigation was begun on methods of removing petroleum hydrocarbons from soil using a solvent extraction process. It was expected that most of the users of this technology would be organizations related to the oil industry, so target sites for eventual clean-up were refineries, tank farms, and oil transfer stations. This made the choice of hexane and NGC solvents even more feasible as they would be readily available at or near the contaminated sites and at a relatively low cost to the client. Favourable results obtained from laboratory scale experiments encouraged further investigation of the process at the bench scale level, again successful. This report provides a comprehensive summary of all results obtained during the past three years of research and describes the analytical methods.

Study of an initial characterization of effluent discharges at 11 industrial sites within the Fraser River Estuary. The discharges were sampled for general parameters such as pH and suspended solids, chemical contaminants, acute and chronic toxicity, and bioavailability. Samples of effluent were collected on three days at each of 17 discharge locations at the 10 industrial sites. The acute toxicity of the 10 primary effluents was measured using both water fleas and rainbow trout. These samples were also tested for effects on reproduction and survival of the daphnid *Ceriodaphnia dubia*. Eight-day tests to measure muscle bio-uptake of heavy metals, polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons and chlorinated phenolic compounds were performed using rainbow trout.

This study is a re-examination of the hypothesis of an historic migration of the western Cree resulting from the introduction of the fur trade. The study examines the historical background and development of the now-accepted view of Cree history; the reliability and limitations of the primary records as a source of evidence for Cree movements; the reconstruction of the identity and locations of Cree groups for evidence of a recent migration from an eastern forest habitat; an examination of the sources for the territorial limits of the Assiniboin for evidence of a migration; and a similar examination of adjacent Indian groups for evidence that they had been forced from their homelands by invading Cree and Assiniboin. Emphasis is on historic documents written between 1682, when English and French traders appeared on western Hudson Bay, and 1781-82 when the Cree inhabitants were decimated by smallpox resulting in the disappearance of former recognizable groups.

Prepared for Transportation Development Centre, Policy and Coordination, Transport Canada ; by ATG Automation Technologies Group Ltd. Montreal : The Corporation, 1991. xxiv, 124 p. : Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 95-00318 (2 fiche)

This project examined the feasibility of implementing an electronic waybill system for railways that would be consistent with the transportation of dangerous goods legislation and would also reduce the paperwork burden, in particular the Emergency Response Form, on shippers and carriers. The project examined the possibility of implementing a system based on Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) technology that would allow the dissemination of emergency response information to first responders in the event of an accident. A prototype software system was developed to collect and disseminate the information and a prototype field communications set of portable computer and cellular phone equipment was assembled to demonstrate the feasibility of communicating via computer with field personnel at an accident site.

Environment Canada, Environmental Protection Service and Environmental Conservation Service : publications marketing study

Ramsden & Associates. Ottawa : Environmental Protection Service ; Environmental Conservation Service, 1994. 53 p. MICROLOG 95-00365 (1 fiche)

This report presents the results of a study to identify the revenue generating potential of specific publications and/or groupings of publications; the marketability of current publications as priced documents; and strategies that can be developed to increase marketability and sales. A brief questionnaire was circulated to personnel within Environment Canada to collect relevant data and to allow a means of comparing publications within each section on the same grounds. Publication lists and sample publications were examined from a number of groups that addressed a wide variety of audiences, including school children, technical experts, and scientists. A telemarketing survey contacted recent recipients of publications to gauge awareness of the recipient's knowledge about the publication and to monitor their sensitivity to pricing publications. Interviews were held with other federal departments to identify the means by which they were marketing their publications. The feasibility of joint or cooperative publishing with other federal government agencies and/or private sector companies was addressed, along with the potential for electronic publishing.

Belgium is one of the smallest countries in the European Community, yet its small size does not reflect its relative importance either in commercial or economic terms. Markets for construction materials, hardware and do-it-yourself are closely linked, and for this reason they are combined here in one market profile. The existing split in the actual marketplace has been taken into account in the analytical approach, so the first section deals in detail with the market for construction materials, while the second section focuses on the market for hardware and do-it-yourself articles.

Europe 1992 : European film and television markets

Ottawa : External Affairs and International Trade Canada, 1993. v, 306 p.
MICROLOG 95-00262 (4 fiche)

The aim of the report is to provide Canadian audiovisual producers with a detailed overview of the key European markets and to assist them, where possible, in identifying appropriate strategies for doing business in those markets. The report is divided into five volumes. This volume, the first, provides an overview of the European context in which France, Germany, Spain and the UK now exist. In the summary section, it outlines some pointers as to the likely future opportunities and threats in each market, and identify useful lessons for Canadian producers, based on other producer's experiences of those markets. There then follows a profile of the relevant European Community legislation which affects each of the four countries under consideration. As appendices to this volume, are included a bibliography of sources, a list of people who were interviewed or who responded to questionnaires, and also a number of case studies of Canadian companies/producers which have experience of dealing with Europe.

Evaluation of the leachability characteristics of pentachlorophenol (PCP), creosote, and ammoniacal chromium arsenate (ACA) wood preservatives from freshly treated wood products. The study was designed to reproduce the conditions found in a typical treated product storage yard and to determine the potential chemical concentration that may be found in rainfall-generated leachate. The test products included pentachlorophenol treated utility poles, creosote treated timbers, creosote treated marine pilings, and ACA treated utility poles. Bundles of test products were placed over collection trays to collect the leachate generated by natural rainfall and by sprinklers with tap water. Analyses included pH, oil and grease, total organic carbon, ammonia, metals, polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbons (PAH), chlorinated and non-chlorinated phenols, resin acids, and fish toxicity. A quality assurance and quality control (QA/QC) program was included to verify the validity of the analyses.

The Canadian Environmental Protection Act (CEPA) was proclaimed in 1988 to remedy deficiencies in the existing legislation on toxic substances; introduce the life-cycle concept as the key analytical tool for managing chemicals; consolidate existing federal environmental legislation and ensure greater consistency in enforcement and penalties; improve the Federal Government's own environmental performance; and enable Canada to fulfill its International obligations. This evaluation began with an investigation of the status of the implementation of the Act that identifies the issues for evaluation, then examines the effectiveness of specific mechanisms and management arrangements developed to implement CEPA. The study also synthesizes the impacts of the Act, assesses the degree to which CEPA's objectives have been achieved; and evaluates the implications of the findings with regard to alternatives. Information was gathered through over 100 interviews, file reviews, a case study, a workshop, and a review of the literature.

By Calvin Lee and Patty Pearcey. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1993. 35 p. : Bibl.

This report documents the history and development of the Stamp's Place Safety Committee. The report also looks at how the Committee, over time and through a number of actions, particularly the Safety Fair, has attempted to address crime issues by increasing community cohesion. The first section of the report describes Stamp's Place and the surrounding neighborhood. The second section details the structure of the committee, the principles and how the committee defined short, medium and long range goals. It also draws out some of the challenges the Committee has had to face, some of which will be common to any community development process, some unique to public housing. The report looks at the delicate balance which must be maintained between the process of community empowerment, and working toward a partnership with powerful institutions such as the police and the housing authority.

Dans le contexte des efforts de nettoyage des lieux contaminés du Canada, déployés dans le cadre du Programme national d'assainissement des lieux contaminés, on a identifié les biotests sur les organismes entiers comme un outil d'évaluation des sols, des sédiments déposés en eau douce, et de la qualité des eaux douces dans les lieux contaminés. On a revu et évalué les procédés des tests biologiques employés au Canada et ailleurs pour choisir les tests qui seront inclus dans les séries de tests réalisés à des fins d'évaluation des milieux susmentionnés. On a utilisé une méthode à deux niveaux pour évaluer chacun des tests à la fois au niveau de la détection et au niveau de l'évaluation définitive. On a placé chacun des tests dans l'une des catégories "utilisable", "prototype" ou "de développement" pour chaque niveau. On a trouvé un ensemble utilisable de tests qui ne nécessitent pas d'autres recherches pour chacun des trois milieux considérés. On a déterminé les travaux supplémentaires nécessaires pour élever les tests prototypes au niveau des tests susceptibles d'être inclus dans la série de tests d'évaluation. On a aussi tenu compte dans la composition finale des séries de tests d'évaluation actuelles et futures, de la représentation des niveaux trophiques, de leur sensibilité, de leur reproductibilité et de leur pertinence dans le contexte canadien. On a défini les priorités futures du point de vue de l'évaluation des contaminants au moyen d'organismes biologiques dans chaque milieu, notamment le perfectionnement et la mise au point de nouveaux tests sur des organismes entiers, les tests effectués sur plusieurs espèces, l'évaluation de l'incidence des contaminants sur les processus microbiens, et les tests in situ.

The purpose of this study is to describe skin boot production in Arctic Bay and to analyze the factors influencing kamik production. This description may be valuable to northern educators, applied anthropologists, folklorists, ethnologists, and curators. Sealskin preparation and boot construction techniques were collected through participant-observation. Influencing factors were divided into social, physical and economic categories. Family size, lifestyle, health, knowledge, age, sex, time, and abilities of the seamstress; the availability, the price, and condition of seal pelts; and the season, terrain, social occasion, and the end use of skin boots influenced their production.

For most programs, the evaluation focused on Agreement accomplishments over the first four years. The report includes an analysis of both general overall Agreement-related issues as well as program-specific issues for each of the programs. A summary of findings for each program are presented, with a logical framework analysis for each program that depicts the overall objective addressed, the program objective, financial inputs from the Agreement and other sources, a brief summary of the outputs, and external factors that impacted on delivery. An analysis of Agreement level issues includes rationale and agreement objective achievement, issues and opportunities for the future, administration and implementation, complementarity with other programs, and economic impacts.

The Snare River provides the Yellowknife region with hydroelectric power at three dams currently on line, with the first constructed in 1948 at Snare Rapids, the second at Snare Falls, downstream of the first plant and the third, in 1974-75, further downstream at Snare Forks. In 1977, a more extensive fish sampling and tagging program was conducted to collect baseline data on the fish population in sections of the river altered by hydroelectric projects. This report presents the data collected in five areas of the Snare River influenced by the cumulative series of hydroelectric developments. Multi-mesh gillnets were used to obtain a representative sample of the various fish populations within each sub-area during the open water season and fish were tagged from 17 May to 24 July. The biweekly catch composition in experimental gillnets for each study area and the catch per gillnet mesh size are presented for walleye, lake trout, lake whitefish, lake cisco, northern pike, white sucker, and long-nose sucker. Age-specific data on length, weight, age, sex, and maturity are also included.

The paper explores any connection between the type or level of immigration to Canada and the type or level of serious criminality in Canadian society.

A number of analytical methods have been employed in these assessments, like surplus production analysis, virtual population analysis, several variants of sequential age-structured analyses, dynamic pool models and depletion estimators. Biological objectives are the only consideration for these assessments and yield options. Yield options and recommendations on catch limitations and other management measures to achieve biological objectives are made to the fishery managers of Off-shore Division of Fisheries Branch (Pacific Region). Alternative options allow managers to consider high risk and low risk yields in relation to a stock's potential productivity.

Growth strategies for the 1990s and beyond : updating British Columbia's planning system

Victoria : Ministry of Municipal Affairs, 1994. 31 p. : ill. ISBN 0-7726-2259-0
MICROLOG 95-00181 (1 fiche)

This discussion paper proposes innovative changes to British Columbia's planning system that will make it easier for local governments and the province to cooperatively address the critical issues of how to accommodate growth without destroying the livability and natural environment of the province. The paper describes the context for change; principles for an updated planning system, including region-wide strategies, development of strategies in the regions, consultative processes, and involvement of the province; proposals for an updated system, including interactive planning, the general purpose of planning, and provincial involvement; and what can be achieved through the update. Appendices compare planning systems of Washington, Oregon, and Ontario, and provide a summary of frequently raised issues and options for change suggested by participants.

British Columbia. Ministry of Education. Victoria : The Ministry, 1994. 43 p. : Bibl.

The policy for reporting student progress is based on ministerial orders and regulations authorized under the School Act. It outlines reporting requirements for formal and informal reporting, as well as the roles and responsibilities of the ministry, school administrators and teachers for the implementation of this policy. The policy outlined in this document is effective September 1994. The use of the symbol IP (In Progress) is optional in the 1994-95 school year but is required for the 1995-96 school year. This document provides teachers and administrators with guidelines for reporting student progress for the primary, intermediate and graduation years.

This monograph compares material from the Iglulualumiut site near the mouth of the Horton River, excavated in 1987, two sites investigated by Stefansson in 1911, and one investigated by John Hadley of the Canadian Arctic Expedition in 1917. All sites are in the Franklin Bay area in the western part of Amundsen Gulf and represent about 400 years of Inuit cultural development. The report describes the sites; equipment used for sea and land hunting, fishing, and transportation; men's tools; and women's tools and domestic items. The report also provides a chronology and cultural position and gives an overview of Iglulualumiut prehistory.

The IDZ study formed part of the first year of the Fraser River Estuary Monitoring Program environmental monitoring program. The study sampled receiving water and sediments within the IDZs of 10 companies that were also sampled as part of FREMP's effluent characterization study. A reference site was established near the FREMP water quality monitoring station at Mission. Field measurements included pH, temperature, dissolved oxygen, and salinity. Sediment samples were analyzed for physico-chemical parameters and toxicity. All samples were analyzed for particle size, total organic carbon, and total metals. Sediments from sites related to the forest industry were analyzed for chlorophenols, while polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs) were measured in samples from two companies. Effluent dilutions at the edge of the IDZ were calculated based on the drogue data.

International R&D spillovers between industries in Canada and the United States

By Jeffrey I. Bernstein and the National Bureau of Economic Research. Ottawa: Industry Canada, 1994. iv, 67 p. : Bibl. (Working paper / Canada. Industry Canada; no. 3) French ed. (Débordements transfrontaliers de R&D...) on the same fiche. MICROLOG 95-00205 (2 fiche)

This study has three objectives. Its primary purpose is to investigate the importance of international spillovers between Canadian and U.S. industries and to estimate the effects of both domestic and international spillovers on production cost, traditional input-output ratios (such as labour-output, and physical capital-output ratios), and research and development (R&D) intensity for eleven manufacturing industries in the United States and Canada. The second objective is to measure productivity growth rates for each of the eleven industries and to determine the productivity gains associated with international spillovers. The third objective is to estimate the private and social rates of return associated with R&D capital and to determine the extra-private returns arising from spillovers between Canada and the United States. Across the vast expanse of northern lands from eastern Siberia to Greenland a great variety of native kayaks were created by the Koryak, Chukchi, Aleut, Yuit and Inuit. Some fifty or sixty different models can be distinguished, and further sub-varieties as well, which scholars group into about a dozen major lots or families. Canada's share of this spectrum is the subject of this essay which deals with three kayak groups, labelled for convenience "Mackenzie", "Central Canadian", and "East Canadian". Each is treated mainly in terms of historical records and construction. Variation within each grouping is discussed, but without more study a definitive statement is not possible. This essay is just an initial survey of Canada's kayaks. A score of scale lines drawings, mostly of kayaks in the Canadian Museum of Civilization, are included along with some photographs. Environment Canada will use the Envirosource information holdings inventory system to conduct a Canada Information Network (CIN) Envirosource public access project to provide easy, user-friendly, single-window access to Environment Canada information. This impact and issues assessment report outlines the impacts and issues that are to be evaluated or resolved for a successful implementation of a public access information interchange environment, identifying and describing those issues and impacts that must be thoroughly evaluated. The report discusses Environment Canada issues, including technical support, infrastructure, Environment Canada's libraries and inquiry centres, respecting contributor's privacy, cost recovery, use of a toll-free service, revenue allocation, Federal Government issues, and public issues. Other aspects include distribution on the Internet; use of third party distributors such as CANOLE, QL Systems, and Bell Canada's INET/2000 notice board; and a high level action plan. CA EV ND SC TE

Japanese squid driftnet fishery, 1988-90, what the observers saw versus the reported catches in the fleet: a study of flying squid, albacore tuna and Pacific pomfret catch statistics

Ottawa: Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, Biological Sciences Branch, Pacific Biological Station, 1994. viii, 63 p. : ill., Bibl. (Canadian technical report of fisheries and aquatic sciences / Canada. Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans; no. 1968 ISSN 0706-6457) CCG-P no. Fs 97-6/1968E MICROLOG 95-00294 (1 fiche)

This report used data for 1988-90 to compare observer and fleet effort, calculate correlations between observer and fleet catch rates for squid, perform weighted regressions of observed squid catch rates on fleet catch rates, estimate differences between observer and fleet catches of squid, and estimate amounts of albacore tuna and Pacific pomfret discarded by the commercial fleet. Flying squid, albacore tuna, and Pacific pomfret represented high, medium, and low-valued species respectively. For each species, the study examined the relationship between the catch and catch rate records provided by observers and the landing statistics reported by the Fisheries Agency of Japan. Based on the observer data, the amount of albacore tuna and Pacific pomfret that was discarded by the commercial fishery (from June to September only) each year was estimated. As the fishery spanned a broad longitudinal range, the relationship between observer records and land statistics for flying squid was examined using three levels of geographical stratification. This report is an analysis of unpublished coal exploration data from the Quinsam mine area in the northwest corner of the Comox sub-basin of the Cretaceous to Eocene Georgia basin. The analysis was conducted to assess the kaolin potential of the basal strata of the Upper Cretaceous Nanaimo Group and immediately underlying rocks in an area where the pre-Cretaceous basement is locally kaolinized. Because the only potential kaolin producer known in the subbasin, the Lang Bay deposit, is restricted to the basal part of the Nanaimo Group, and to the weathered rocks immediately underneath, this investigation involved searching for other areas that met the parameters.

During the mid-eighteenth century, early influences from coastal trade in iron from Russian sources had repercussions on Indian villages up the Nass and Skeena rivers. Eulachon grease trails that had been established between villages for millennia took on new strategic importance in intertribal warfare once iron began to move along them. Kitwanga Fort was probably one of many settlements established to control this new trade. This report describes the cultural setting of the area, including the history of the tribes on the Northern Northwest Coast, the trails and trade, early historical contacts, and exploration of the Skeena River; and the physical setting at the Ta'awdzep Site, including geology, botany, excavations, test trenches, cultural stratigraphy, and the reconstruction of the model of Kitwanga Fort.

This document examines when security can (or should) affect you as a farmer. It then looks at how security affects property. A discussion of when security should be used, what it should cover and what you should do before you sign it comes next. The chapter ends with some of the things you're likely to find in a security agreement, and some tips about how they can affect your business. Chapters three, four, five and six examine particular types of agreements and some laws that govern them. Those chapters also contain the bad news - what can happen when there is default under an agreement, and what rights debtors and guarantors have to fight back. Chapter seven summarizes what happens when the fight is in a court. Chapters eight and nine have been left to the last, but the topics they discuss are vitally important to farmers. They deal with the Farm Debt Review Act and the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, which give very special rights to those who qualify as "farmers" under them.

Life history as an anthropological technique is rarely used due to an assumed difficulty with analysis; however, a consideration of life history narratives provides some insight into individual understanding of experience, which often becomes lost in abstract generalized accounts of culture. Anthropologists derive personal meaning and cultural meaning from the same observed behavior and it is because the distinction between individual and cultural is blurred in a life history that analysis becomes a problem. This document is an elaboration of one individual's understanding of experience; an explication of inherent meaning, both personal and cultural, as expressed in the narrative of a Cree woman from Rupert House, James Bay, Quebec.

This study investigates patterns of lithic technological variability in relation to settlement strategies that were employed by late prehistoric inhabitants of central and southern regions of interior British Columbia. The study conducted a controlled experiment to determine the degree to which lithic debitage can be used to predict stages of chipped stone tool manufacture and to devise an efficient means of classifying debitage into general reduction stages. The result is a formulation of a debitage classification that classifies flakes into early, middle, or late reduction stages and into bifacial and bipolar reduction types. The archaeological analyses in the second stage of the research use the debitage reduction stage classification and the occurrence of 861 lithic tools to examine the nature of interassemblage variability across 38 sites from the Eagle Lake, Mouth of the Chilcotin, Lillooet, and Hat Creek regions, using multivariate and bivariate analysis.

La Commission est un tribunal administratif indépendant. Elle se compose de trois sections distinctes : la Section du statut de réfugié (SSR), la Section d'appel de l'immigration (SAI) et la Section d'arbitrage (SA). La SSR s'occupe exclusivement des demandes de statut de réfugié, alors que la SAI entend les appels relatifs à des mesures de renvoi et au rejet de demandes de droit d'établissement présentées par des membres parrainés de la catégorie de la famille. Pour sa part, la SAI tient des enquêtes en matière d'immigration et procède à l'examen des motifs de détention. Ce document présente le rapport annuel de la Commission qui se penche sur la Loi sur l'accès à l'information, et la Loi sur la protection des renseignements personnels, y inclut des demandes, des exceptions et exclusions, méthodes de communications et frais, coûts, plaintes et enquêtes, et appels.

Long-distance transport of low-rank coal-water fuels

Prepared for the Transportation Development Centre, Policy and Coordination Group, Transport Canada ; by CPCS Ltd. ; with assistance from Saskatchewan Research Council. Montreal : The Corporation, 1991. xiv, 66 p. : Ill., Bibl..
MICROLOG 95-00317 (1 fiche)

Coal deposits that represent 83% of Canada's known fossil fuel reserves are mainly found in the deposits of Alberta sub-bituminous and Saskatchewan lignite coals. Potential markets for these low-rank, low-sulphur coals are electricity utilities and industrial thermal power plants in central Canada and in the Asia Pacific region. This report examines the possibility of combining modern techniques of high density coal-water slurries, hydrothermal dewatering of low-rank coal, long-distance liquid fuel commodity transport, and direct firing of coal-water fuel in utility and industrial power plants. A detailed economic analysis is given for proposed coal-water fuel preparation plants and pipeline costs.

This multidisciplinary collection of 18 essays, presented at the symposium "Making and metaphor: a discussion of meaning in contemporary craft", illustrates the complex and significant role of contemporary craft in society. Historical analysis highlights how the fields of education, architecture and industrial design have influenced craft products and our perceptions of them.

In the summer 1992, about 482,000 sockeye salmon seemed to disappear on their way to spawning grounds in the Fraser River system. Careful checks of the hydro-acoustic counting system at Mission suggest this discrepancy could not be accounted for by over-estimation of the number of fish entering the river. This report gives the results of an investigation into the circumstances and recommends needed improvements in the management system. The report describes the fishery, fishing treaties with Native bands and the United States, the Indian fisheries experiment, and the possibilities and probabilities involved in the missing sockeye salmon.

Electronic components include electron tubes, printed circuit boards, semiconductors and related devices, electronic capacitors, electronic resistors, electronic coils and transformers, and electronic connectors. Information was obtained from a mail survey of 200 purchasing managers and other decision makers at manufacturing plants in the study area with 50 employees or more. The study identifies market and product factors, including demand and major market segments; the market in each of the states; and demand factors. Survey findings on exports and Canadian operations, component use and sources, im-

At present, British Columbia is neither a major producer nor a major user of bentonite, although existing and potential reserves have been delineated by industry and the government. This study was undertaken to determine if there is sufficient usage of the mineral in B.C. and/or potential for market development of bentonite products for domestic use or export to the United States and Pacific Rim countries. The report describes the characteristics of bentonite and correlates them to the grades and specifications in the major areas of bentonite applications; deals with the industry setting; and briefly describes the geology of known deposits in the province, before dealing in some detail with the economic factors. The outlook and strategic considerations summarize the conclusions and recommendations, including the potential for production of value-added products that would attract industries to the province. Il rappelle brièvement les diverses méthodes employées antérieurement pour étudier ces questions et souligne les principales différences caractérisant les méthodes appliquées dans cette étude. La source de données utilisée consiste en une population longitudinale de contribuables ayant déclaré un revenu d'emploi de façon constante entre 1981 et 1990. Bien que l'analyse porte essentiellement sur les particuliers travaillant dans le secteur des pêches, elle établit des comparaisons avec plusieurs autres groupes. Pour chaque particulier de la population longitudinale, l'analyse est fondée sur les diverses sources de revenu et sur le revenu total. On fait également des comparaisons avec les données transversales afin de bien cerner les différences dans les niveaux et les sources de revenu.

The Meta Incognita Project investigates Martin Frobisher's Arctic expedition of 1576-78 (which included the first English attempt to establish a colony in Canada and to mine its mineral resources) and their effects on the culture of the Inuit he encountered. The project is also aimed at ensuring the long-term protection of the historic sites associated with these expeditions. It seeks a fuller understanding of this episode in the history of European exploration of the New World through archaeological data, Inuit oral history, and further archival studies. This progress report, focusing on field investigations conducted in 1991 and on the analytical work supporting them, comprises papers by Canadian and United States archaeologists, anthropologists, and geologists, as well as other scientists engaged in the project. Besides the preliminary findings from their work, the papers present an introduction to the historical context and to the problems and questions facing researchers.

Native North American interaction patterns

This volume contains 12 papers from the Conference on Native North American Interaction Patterns, held in Edmonton, Alberta, in April, 1982. The conference brought together anthropologists, linguists, and educators who shared a common concern with native language use and non-verbal communication. The papers describe interaction patterns for a sampling of Amerindian cultures. In some cases the patterns are found to have wide geographic distribution. The historical basis for some of the patterns is also explored. Although preliminary, the findings are seen as contributing to an understanding of both native interaction and the interaction between natives and non-natives in North America.

Operation Clean Feather was developed as a multi-faceted project to reduce the incidence of chronic discharges of oil into Placentia Bay, Newfoundland, and thus seabird mortality due to oiling. This report summarizes the accomplishments of the operation, evaluates project elements, and makes recommendations for future operations. Beached bird surveys were conducted to monitor the occurrence of oiled birds and oil on 33 beaches beginning in early January and running through to the end of March in 1991 and 1992. Twenty-two beaches on the east side of the bay were surveyed weekly and 11 beaches on the Burin Peninsula were surveyed monthly, weather and travel conditions permitting. If an oil pollution event was detected, survey intensity increased in the affected area to assess the marine bird mortality. Reports of oil birds given by the general public were also recorded.

In northwestern Ontario, large numbers of container stock are overwintered either outdoors, where they are subject to severe winter conditions and considerable damage, or in frozen storage, an expensive and somewhat risky method. To examine an alternative method of overwintering black spruce container stock, a test was conducted using different configurations of a rigid Styrofoam SM insulating blanket. This technical note provides the results of third year outplants and discusses the costs of the method.

Pacific Region strategic outlook, Vision 2000, a vision of fisheries at the beginning of the 21st century -- Discussion draft

Victoria : Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, Pacific Region, 1989. 25 p.
MICROLOG 95-00306 (1 fiche)

This document explores the ten-year planning horizon for Pacific Region fisheries management and outlines future measures, providing a vision of the fisheries at the beginning of the 21st century under a new policy regime and the basic policy elements that need to be in place; highlighting the major regional trends and outlining the component strategies needed to reach that vision; and detailing the significant issues impacting Pacific Region fisheries and habitat management that produce the need for change. These include allocation conflict; fishing pressure; the consultative process; industry adjustment because of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), and the need for international competitiveness; harvesting sector over-capitalization; licensing policy; native fisheries; the environment and global warming; increased workload; hydropower development and export; and aquaculture development.

This study identifies and documents the present-day design, production, and ornamentation of moccasins by the women on the Janvier Reserve at Chard, northern Alberta. Data were collected from archival and museum sources, as well as from fieldwork conducted at Chard in the spring of 1986. Included is a comparison of the stylistic differences between the moccasins made today and those produced before World War II, although a definitive analysis was not possible, given the small museum sample. The research constituted one of the requirements of the author's Master of Science degree in Clothing and Textiles at the University of Manitoba.

The Essex Aluminum Plant produces aluminum components for automobile engines using a flux containing fluoride and Cl<sub>2</sub> gas. Concentrations of HF and HCl in ambient air near the plant were measured by a mobile tandem mass spectrometer and were found to exceed air quality standards. This report provides the results of an investigation that used grass tissue samples as biological monitors of these air contaminants. Samples of grass were taken at several locations and silver maple foliage was also sampled at some locations. The samples were analyzed for fluoride and, in the early studies, for chlorine.

Several previous surveys indicated that emissions of fluorides increased after expansion of the brick production facilities in late 1986 through mid-1987. Tree foliage was collected from exposed middle branches at the same sites sampled in previous years. At each site, duplicate foliage samples were collected. Almost all sites were off company property. In addition, foliage of trees and other vegetation growing in the vicinity of the collection sites was inspected for fluoride injury. This report gives the results of the sampling.

Selected benthic contaminants were reported in Vancouver Harbour excluding polychlorinated dibenzo-para-dioxins and polychlorinated dibenzofurans. Due to fishery closures from dioxin and furan contamination in certain areas, there was a need to measure the levels of these compounds in harbour sediments to supplement the existing database. The study located sampling sites near potential anthropogenic sources, past and present, including anti-sapstain treatment and lumber storage areas, sawmills using chlorophenolate treated lumber, ship building and repair operations, combined sewer overflow, stormwater, and combustion. Sediment PAH levels were measured for relative comparison among sites. The study area included False Creek, Vancouver Harbour between the First and Second Narrows (Inner Harbour), Vancouver Harbour between Second Narrows and the Indian Arm/Port Moody Arm junction (Central Harbour), Port Moody Arm, and Indian Arm. Two relatively undisputed sites in Indian Arm were selected to provide local reference data.

This study investigates the prehistoric transition from egalitarian to ranked social structure at Kitselas Canyon, Skeena River, British Columbia to develop a model of the evolution of cultural complexity and to develop a prehistoric sequence for the area, to be used as a framework for the investigation of cultural change. The evolutionary model is evaluated against archaeological data from Kitselas Canyon and the lower Skeena River. The study seeks to understand the relationships of the prehistoric people of Kitselas Canyon and how they changed over time by using data from the Gilaus and the Paul Mason Sites. A quantitative analysis of lithic artifacts from the two sites is used to establish a cultural sequence for the area, which is then used as a temporal framework for the investigation of social change.

Entre 1835 et 1870, des missionnaires protestants suisses et français furent envoyés au Bas-Canada pour évangéliser les Canadiens catholiques. La facilité de s'exprimer en français, la connaissance de la Bible et des doctrines catholiques, de même que les méthodes agressives des colporteurs protestants ont provoqué une riposte vive et soutenue de l'Église catholique. Ce document porte sur le protestantisme français au Québec entre 1840 et 1919. Le document examine l'image des protestants francophones durant cette période et se penche sur les points suivants : les perceptions chez les élites; l'image des protestants francophones; les protestants anglophones; les perceptions dans les groupes populaires; le comportement; le journal de Joseph Vessot, colporteur français; et la bibliographie d'Alphonse Therrien, pasteur canadien.

This protocol, developed for evaluating organic data from the Fraser River Basin, describes the evaluation of the quality of trace organic data to derive a numerical ranking from 0-4 for each aspect of the sample collection, storage, analysis, and data reduction process. The protocol uses a set of decision trees to derive rating for the steps of collection methodology, storage, analytical method, reference standard, and quality assurance/quality control. An overall rating is assigned by a weakest link approach as the lowest rating achieved among the individual categories.

The committee was established to review alternative security instruments and to provide advice to government on appropriate security instruments for reclamation of mine sites. The committee was also asked to examine the related issue of mine reclamation risk, which addresses the concern that the proposed reclamation plan and budget are adequate to satisfy the plan's objectives and fund the required work. This interim report describes the establishment of the framework for discussing reclamation security issues, outlines the committee's interim conclusions, and describes the tasks to be completed in Phase Two.

Overview of partnership trend accompanying initiatives in teacher induction programs. Highlighted issues to consider in effecting substantial reform in teacher education and professional development. Concluded that for within-school partnerships (involving individuals, as in "mentoring") to have long-term and profound impact, attention must be paid to individual needs and preferences as well as to the culture of the workplace. For institutional partnerships (involving government, faculties of education, school boards and teachers' federations) to effect substantive change, principles of shared responsibility and collaboration must be agreed upon, and considerable negotiation among interest groups must take place.

SeaSonde is an integrated data acquisition and processing system for remotely mapping ocean surface currents, based on coastal ocean dynamics application radar (CODAR) principles. This demonstration project was begun in June 1992 to collect surface current information in the more sheltered, but tidally active waters of the Straits of Juan de Fuca and Georgia. Two radar units spanning the strait between Victoria and Port Angeles were deployed, and a series of tests with real-time data transmission to Seasconsult's office in Vancouver were carried out. This report discusses the data collected in July 1992. In addition to the radar data collection program, four days of Orion buoy drifts were carried out, as well as deployment of a woodchip slick to simulate oil-on-water motion during one of the drifter experiments. These drifts were targeted for the coverage area of the radars.

The logging industry experienced a steady decline in fatalities from a high of 36 in 1987 to a low of nine in 1992, but they suddenly increased to 20 in 1993. To date in 1994 there have been 15 fatalities in the industry. This study evaluated 265 deaths from 1 January 1983 to 1 August 1994 to determine trends, find causes, and identify particular hazards; and to formulate elements of a strategy that could lead to a resumption of the previous downward trend. Prevention Division records were examined and other studies were reviewed to identify trends in occupation, time of year, age, experience, geographical, and topographical location; particular hazards; any hitherto unknown factors or dangers; and what, if anything, has changed from 1991/92.

The task force was formed in February 1993 to address solutions to managing wood residue at sawmills and log sort yards without burning or landfilling. In particular, the task force addressed the phase-out of beehive burners by 1 January 1996. The task force reviewed existing information on quantities of mill residues, and options available for reducing, reusing, and recycling the residues; identified and developed partnership options/opportunities among users of wood fibre such as pulp mills, manufacturers, and mills to achieve the objective of phase-out of beehive burners; identified and developed partnerships for economic development opportunities for longer term use of wood residue for beehive burners/open burns in non-sensitive areas; and developed an action plan that continues industry's efforts to move into life cycle stewardship and pollution prevention planning for wood residue. This final report describes the activities of the task force and its committees and the results of its deliberations, including criteria for the total phase-out of beehive burners and the cost of industry of such an action.

Prepared for Transportation Development Centre, Policy and Coordination, Transport Canada ; by R.S. Wallace & Associates Ltd. Manotick, ON : The Corporation, 1991. xxii, 63 p. : ill. MICROLOG 95-00314 (1 fiche)

Development of a system to track aircraft lateral landing dispersion patterns grew from work on developing guidelines for lower cost, simpler airports, needed to provide air transportation to communities too small to warrant the current standard airports. Many experts believe safe design changes to small airports to take into consideration developments in aircraft can be incorporated but are unable to do so until empirical data and subsequent analysis identifies the safe limits of such changes. The project was conducted to provide the empirical data and the results of subsequent analysis. It then applies equipment and procedures to collect the empirical landing data, then determine what cost effective savings in design criteria can safely be made. This report describes the project and its objectives and scope; the methodology, including initial and final project work plans; the system, including location; full-scale field trials in November 1987 and 1989; and future system refinements in software and equipment, and potential system applications. MICROLOG 95-00013 (1 fiche)

The Ministère de l'Éducation holds sessions every January, June, and August for secondary school students. For each of these sessions, the Ministère prepares specific examinations in addition to those prepared by the school boards. Every year, the Ministère also publishes detailed statistics on the results obtained on these examinations. At the end of each of the last three years of secondary school, students receive transcripts of their marks. All school boards and private schools also receive a report on their students' results on the ministry examinations and on the local examinations. This report is designed to help them identify the strengths and weaknesses of their educational practices.

Engineering data collection programs from full-scale trials have been a prominent feature of the Canadian approach to the technological development of ice-class vessels. An important use of the data collected on machinery response will be in the development of revisions to the propulsion machinery requirements of the Canadian Arctic Shipping Pollution Prevention Regulations (CASPPR). This report reviewed reports and data from 18 full-scale trials that included propulsion system response measurements, of which 12 were selected as suitable for inclusion in a data sheet of maximum loads and five were used to illustrate typical and extreme time history responses to propeller/ice interaction. A computation of applicable dimensionless coefficients was conducted and preliminary parametric plots were produced from the data selected.

This report consists of two major sections. The first, and major portion of the report, is a demographic, economic and social profile of the Northwest Territories. It provides, "at a glance" summaries of key information related to the NWT. The statistical data is broken down into five sections, providing a simple, but detailed, profile of demographic, economic and social aspects of the NWT. A final "Appendices" section includes a chronology of key historical events in the NWT (from a "Southern" perspective), an annotated bibliography of most of the sources consulted during preparation of the report, a consolidated bibliography of all sources consulted, and a description of sources and methodology for preparation of statistical "Tables" and "Figures".

The Ruin Island phase of Thule culture was first defined by Erik Holtved following his archaeological investigations in the Thule District of Northwest Greenland in the 1930s. A distinctive Alaskan cast to the material culture, associated Norse items, and conflicting radiocarbon assessments have made it difficult to determine the cultural relationships and chronological position of the Ruin Island phase within the Canadian Thule culture continuum. This study draws on data from recent archaeological research in the Bache Peninsula region of eastern Ellesmere Island, Northwest Territories, to clarify and extend the knowledge of the culture phase and the question of Thule culture expansion into the Canadian High Arctic. The report presents the cultural setting, Neo-Eskimo culture history, and Thule Island research in the Eastern High Arctic; describes the Ruin Island phase sites; analyses the artifacts found; gives a chronology and cultural position; and provides subsistence analysis.

Canartic has recently completed the five-year shipboard ice navigation support system (SINSS) development program, the purpose of which was to develop an ice intelligence system on board M.V. ARCTIC to enable the vessel to safely and efficiently navigate through heavy sea ice conditions. The program fostered several innovative ideas that cannot be tested on the current hardware base. Canartic has defined the functional and hardware specifications for a second generation ice navigation system. These specifications describe the sources and format of data as well as the specific user requirements expected from a second generation ice navigation system. Phase I established the initial system design, implemented a base system, initiated radar mapping technique development, and initiated the necessary modifications of peripheral systems such as radar and navigating instruments.

In 1988, Canartic completed the five-year shipboard ice navigation support system (SINSS) program that developed an ice intelligence system on board the M.V. ARCTIC to enable the vessel to safely and efficiently navigate through heavy sea ice conditions. The SINSS program produced innovative ideas that cannot be tested on the current hardware base, so it was proposed to build a state-of-the-art hardware base capable of supporting the implementation of the newly defined ice navigation techniques and to provide an expandable platform for future developments. Phase I of this project addressed the initial stage of the implementation of the G-2 system, while Phase II dealt with the implementation of all the basic system modules necessary for the reception and manipulation of SAR imagery. During the Phase II project, facilities were developed to receive, display, and manipulate SAR images. The system functions were grouped in modules that share the system workload. The user interfaces provided for some of the modules are described in detail. Hardware components are discussed and a description of the UNIX and X-Windows environment is given.

Cette étude examine comment améliorer le régime de soutien du revenu des pêcheurs de l'Atlantique afin de répondre, à long terme, aux besoins de ces derniers. Elle débute par l'examen du régime de soutien en place, particulièrement des conditions d'admissibilité à l'assurance-chômage ordinaire, à l'assurance-chômage des pêcheurs saisonniers et à l'assurance-chômage des pêcheurs à longue durée d'année. Elle fait ressortir un certain nombre de lacunes dans ce domaine, notamment l'absence de définition d'un groupe cible (c'est-à-dire, les pêcheurs professionnels) et le fait que l'assurance-chômage ne stabilise pas les revenus. De plus, elle montre que l'information échangée entre divers ministères n'est pas harmonisée pour permettre une application efficace du programme.

The main objectives of the survey were: to assess hunters' satisfaction and preferences regarding hunting seasons and bag limits; to determine hunters' opinions on possible options to change regulations when harvest reductions are necessary; and to categorize hunters' perceptions of the most common problems in the management of game bird hunting. The report detail the results of the special hunter opinion survey only as they pertain to the Newfoundland murre hunt.

In 1992, the Northern Oil and Gas Action Program provided funding to study spring waterbird distributions in relation to oil development. The study examined distributions in offshore areas of the Beaufort Sea, Amundsen Gulf, and Lambert Channel and reviewed past and present studies to assess the potential threats from oil exploration and development to spring migrants in the southern Beaufort Sea. The year, aerial surveys were conducted in offshore waters parallel to the southern and eastern coastlines of the Canadian Beaufort Sea, Amundsen Gulf, and Dolphin and Union Straits. Results detail information on Pacific Elders, King Elders, Oldsquaw, loons, scoters, gulls, and murre. Information is also included on weather and ice conditions during the aerial surveys, distributions of key species of birds between Cape Dalhousie and the Baillie Islands in June, and total numbers of the most common bird species observed during aerial surveys in the spring.

The key stream program began in 1984 in response to objectives set out in the Canada-United States Salmon Treaty. This report deals with the determination of spawning escapement of chinook salmon to the Stamp River and related biological information. The study was conducted to estimate the total chinook salmon escapement to the Stamp River; to determine the age and sex composition of both the in-river population and hatchery returns of chinook salmon to the system; and to estimate the total escapement of coded wire tagged chinook salmon to the system, thereby assessing the hatchery contribution to the total escapement. Escapement estimates were derived using visual counts at the Stamp Falls fishway and brailer counts at Robertson Creek Hatchery. Estimates of coded wire tag return, adipose-clip returns, and hatchery contributions were produced using dead recoveries of chinook salmon throughout the Stamp River and safe returns of chinook salmon to Robertson Creek Hatchery.

In 1992, the Ontario Government asked the Environmental Assessment Advisory Committee (EAAC) for advice on whether an individual environmental assessment should be required for the proposed plant. The EAAC recommended against an individual environment assessment for the proposed plant provided that certain recommendations were appropriately addressed, including requesting that the Advisory Committee on Environmental Standards (ACES) carry out a public review and advise on an appropriate standard for tritium in drinking water. This report presents the results of that review, including the public health significance of tritium; a review of public comment, including exposure, risk, feasibility, and implementation; results of an internal review; and recommendations. Herring are an important component of the British Columbia commercial fishery with catch records dating from 1877. Since 1983, herring fisheries have been managed with a fixed quota system in which catch levels are determined prior to the season based on a fixed percentage of forecast stock abundance. This report presents stock assessments from escapement and age-structured analytical models that were developed explicitly for B.C. herring. Both models reconstruct stock abundance from 1951 to last year and forecast pre-spawning abundance for the coming year. Forecasts of recruit spawners are presented as poor, average and good, based on historical recruitment levels. The report does not discuss the development and evaluation of empirical models for forecasting recruitment.

The peat resource of British Columbia has historically been exploited in large scale operations on private lands in the Fraser Delta area and in some small operations near population centres such as Kamloops. Currently, exploitation of the peat resource is on a very small scale, with operations producing only for local markets. This study addresses available markets for peat resources and assesses the potential for developing a viable industry based on peat exploitation. The study summarizes the existing structure and tenure of peatlands and their regulation, and comparisons are made with the larger peat producing provinces of New Brunswick, Quebec, Manitoba, and Alberta. The study identifies and analyzes the non-market forces (mainly legal, land use, and tenure) that are perceived to impede the development of a healthy peat industry in the province.

Surface current measurements in the Juan de Fuca Strait using the SeaSonde HF radar

By Donald O. Hodgins. Ottawa : Environment Canada, Environmental Technology Centre, Emergency Science Division, 1994. v, 365 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (Report series / Environmental Technology Centre (Canada). Emergency Science Division ; EE-149)
MICROLOG 95-00591 (4 fiche)

Surface current mapping with high-frequency, shore-based radars is an effective method for obtaining ocean currents for input to oil spill models. A feasibility study was undertaken in Queen Charlotte Sound and another in Juan de Fuca Strait in July 1992. A third study was undertaken in the Strait of Georgia during July 1993 to map currents in the Fraser River plume, which is composed of brackish, low salinity water whose position is strongly modulated by the tide. It is characterized by strong flows, fronts, and intense current shear across the plume interface at a depth of about 3-4 m. Since the salinity determines the conductivity of the surface water, and the ground-wave radar reception is to some degree dependent on conductivity, the study examined the radar performance in an area where the fresh water jet might affect radar range. The study also acquired data coincident with SAR imagery (ERS-1 and Conair CV580 airborne imagery) for analysis of large-scale surface flow features.

Suspended sediment in aquatic ecosystems : ill effects as a function of concentration and duration of exposure

Although suspended sediments are known to be harmful to clear-water aquatic ecosystems, the recent finding that ill effects increase as a function of dose has created an opportunity to describe the phenomenon in greater detail, and to explore similarities and differences in the response of different species and life stages. The model that describes the properties of dose and response in aquatic ecosystems is based on the work of many researchers. These data sets form a database, presented in the form of a precis. Each precis contains information about individual pollution events in laboratory and field studies to provide concentration of suspended sediments, duration of exposure, and a documented ill effect for individual species and life stages. The method is based on meta-analysis.

About half the papers are concerned with the flow in open channels of various geometrical complexities, providing new information on velocity distribution and secondary flow development, and discussing phenomena such as mixing, stratification, gas transfer at the surface, waves, and sediment transport. As jets and plumes are very relevant in environmental hydraulics, some papers are concerned with these flows and in particular with the influence of buoyancy. Another group of papers looks at flow, mixing, and sedimentation process in pools, vessels, stilling and sediment basins, reservoirs, and vortex diodes. Papers in the sessions on mathematical modelling cover such techniques as integral modes, 2D depth-average models, statistical 3D models, and direct and large-eddy simulations.

Surficial geology mapping was conducted in conjunction with till geochemical sampling to understand the glacial history of the area and provide a basis for design of the sampling program. Surficial geology mapping was completed by interpretation of air photos, field checking existing terrain map data, and stratigraphic and sedimentologic studies of Quaternary exposures in the map area. Ice-flow history for the area was mainly deciphered from the study of crag-and-tail features, flutings, drumlins, striae, and till fabric data.

The subject matter of the 36 tests presented in this document deals principally with three areas of Tuscarora culture: cosmological and traditional religious beliefs, medical practices, and mythic traditions. However, just as religion, medicine and myth do not appear to have been highly differentiated spheres of traditional Tuscarora society, they are seldom treated apart in individual texts. This volume organizes texts around three areas, placing those texts in which religious themes dominate together, and so on. Cosmological and religious topics are the dominant elements in the first four of the texts. The following 19 are concerned with medical practices. Included are texts which indicate how specific diseases are to be treated, and specific medicines prepared; texts which describe the roles which medicines and medical practitioners played in traditional Tuscarora society; and texts which deal with sorcery and witchcraft, practices which were intimately connected with medicine among the Tuscarora. The last 13 texts focus on Tuscarora mythic traditions, and describe many of the major characters who populated these myths.

This book, which arose from a graduate seminar in Maritime history in 1991-92, offers the first systematic and comparative overview of community development for the entire Atlantic region. The book assesses the published census returns from Confederation to the present to track the growth and development of each town and city in the region, and surveys aspects of the region's political economy since Confederation, paying close attention to the rise and fall of an industrial core and the emergent dependencies that were being reshaped by the expanding of government in determining the fate of Atlantic Canada. A typology of community experiences is followed by a reflection on the consequences for the contemporary urban scene of political and economic transformation.

The paper examines the nature of urban/rural fringe development and the characteristics of people who choose to live in there; public and planning policies as a system relating to the interface between rural and urban economies and affecting the development of fringe areas. It then provides an evaluation of regional planning in Prairie cities, including a summary of land-use changes to accommodate expansion of urban areas and increased populations in the urban/rural fringe. The paper concludes with a commentary on the significance of current trends in government regulation for sustainable development. principles.

Using subsidies to promote environmental protection in agriculture : a review of programs in North America and Europe

By Christopher J. Rolfe. Ottawa : Environment Canada, 1993. 34 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-00573 (1 fiche)

This report examines the ways in which subsidies or payments to farmers have been used in jurisdictions throughout North America and Europe to pursue environmental ends. The report examines subsidies that are directly intended to encourage environmental protection, including set-aside and acreage reduction programs, North American Waterfowl Management Plan, subsidies for equipment and capital improvement, provision of farm infrastructure, and incentives for organic farming. It then looks at means by which major domestic support programs, mainly intended to support farmer incomes and encourage exports, can be used to encourage sound agro-environmental practices by tying eligibility to minimum environmental practices.

Bases its policy on the premise that violence is a societal problem and that to confront and reduce it, all parts of society must be involved, including schools. All school boards must begin to develop a violence-prevention policy in consultation with community partners by September, 1994, and this policy must be implemented no later than September, 1995. The purposes of this policy are to: reduce and try to eliminate violence in schools, help students to manage their lives and relationships in non-violent ways. Describe violence as being either physical, verbal, emotional, sexual or racial. Some of the topics to be included in policies are: violence prevention in curriculum, code of behaviour, staff development, home, school and community involvement. Duties of principals, teachers and students are outlined. Includes sections on the Young Offenders Act and the Canadian

Grade 12 graduates were interviewed to determine where they went after grades 12 and 13, what post-secondary programs they pursued, their satisfaction with secondary school, employment patterns and trends, and areas of concern. Over the 3 years studied, more grade 12 students went on the grade 13 and fewer to college. 3-5% of graduates went directly to university, the majority to Lakehead University or Confederation College. Over 90% indicated satisfaction with their preparation for college. Close to 90% of those who went to college were employed when interviewed. Almost one third went directly to work after graduating; close to two-thirds of this group was male. 72-87% were working full-time and indicated satisfaction with their preparation for work. Employment patterns were traditional: few females entered nontraditional occupations. Graduates recommended that students stay in school, take a variety of programs, develop self-discipline, and continue to study mathematics and science. Program suggestions included promoting career planning, cooperative education, and computer courses.

Examples of community policing in collaboration with community agencies are given, including helping crime victims, preventing crime through social programs aimed at preventing criminal behaviour, and preventing crime through opportunity reduction strategies; strategies. Programs currently under way are examined and their implications for community policing noted. The manual looks at other community-based programs across Canada that may contribute to crime prevention by making communities safer and better places to live, and considers the implications of such initiatives for community policing. The manual concludes with a summary of actions to take in developing partnerships with community agencies and provides suggestions on how to involve them. This project was undertaken to provide young people with an opportunity to add their voices to the discourse on the phenomenon of youth gangs/groups and youth violence. The study focuses on a range of youth gangs/groups whose common characteristic is involvement in illegal activities. Its purpose is to define the phenomenon of youth gangs/groups in its current manifestation in Metropolitan Toronto and southern Ontario and provide information for use in the development of appropriate policy and program responses and, ultimately, structural and systemic changes in the delivery of service to victims, gang/group members, and "at risk" and non-offending youth.
